

MEDICAL FOUNDATION OF NASHVILLE

ANNUAL REPORT 2023

FROM OUR CEO

Each year since our founding in 2018, the Medical Foundation of Nashville has faced new challenges and opportunities in our service of the community. I am delighted that growth was one of the opportunities and challenges we faced in 2023! Project Access Nashville Specialty Care will be continuing to expand services and access in 2024, with the help and support of our partners and volunteers. It is those partners and volunteer physician specialists who make our work possible. PANSC doesn't provide the donated care, the partners and volunteers do, with the support of our team. PANSC verifies patient need and eligibility, supports the patient in attending the healthcare appointment and in following the instructions from the physicians.

With community resource partners, PANSC care coordinators can also support social determinants of health for patients, including food insecurity, transportation needs, prescription assistance, and more. PANSC was founded by the Nashville Academy of Medicine because physicians saw a need for charitable healthcare for those who needed a safety net in Davidson County. But the need in our community is not bound by county lines. Since 2018, we have been expanding, and we now serve patients from 36 counties in Middle Tennessee. While the service area has changed, the need for physician volunteers has not. Our team would love to speak with any specialty physician in Middle Tennessee about the possibility of volunteering with PANSC. All it takes is a willingness to take on a few charitable patients a year (or more), and we'll help with the rest!

We're also looking for new opportunities and partners in 2024, particularly as we approach PANSC's 20th anniversary in 2025. If you're interested in our work, please reach out to learn about ways you can join in our efforts to improve the health of our community!

MISSION MOMENT

The Medical Foundation of Nashville supports health access through the Project Access Nashville Specialty Care Program. Sophia's story is just one example of how traditional health access and addressing non-medical, health-related needs are supporting patients.

Sophia has a number of health struggles, and she's only in her 50s. She's now unable to work, doesn't drive, and depends upon her daughter, who she lives with. Sophia enrolled with Project Access Nashville Specialty Care in 2021, when she was referred to a cardiologist, but with no insurance and no other options, she needed a way to seek the help her primary care clinic told her she needed. Since then, she's also been referred for three additional specialties, for unrelated needs. Sophia still regularly sees two volunteer physicians who have provided her specialty healthcare, only seeing her other two volunteer physicians for periodic monitoring appointments. Sophia has become close with her care coordinator as they've navigated her health journey together. Because of where her daughter lives, she doesn't have access to public transportation, so when her daughter couldn't take Sophia to an upcoming appointment, she called her care coordinator. Thanks to a grant from The Community Foundation of Middle Tennessee, her care coordinator was able to schedule a rideshare for her to get to her appointment and back home, a small expense, but one Sophia couldn't afford. Sophia was very nervous about using this service, and riding with a stranger, but her care coordinator explained the process and was available to her every step of the way, including when she exited her appointment from a different door than she entered, and needed help navigating to her ride home. Her care coordinator has also helped her to utilize coupons and find the best price for her prescriptions ordered by her PANSC volunteer physician specialists, and she's connected Sophia to community resource partners, including one who gave Sophia new eyeglasses when her prescription changed. Sophia is a model patient, communicating well with her care coordinator about the struggles she has with her health and following the instructions of her PANSC volunteer physicians, so they can address them together.

In 2023, Project Access Nashville Specialty Care made significant strides toward improving the lives of our patients. By aligning with clinics, hospital partners, and community organizations throughout Middle Tennessee, PANSC is continuing to approach care with a community engaged model. In 2023, the Medical Foundation of Nashville was awarded a Health Resiliency grant by the Tennessee State Department of Health to address access to care in the region through a holistic care model. A priority of the project is expanding our partnerships further into the region, ensuring equitable access is possible for our most vulnerable neighbors.

2023 AT A GLANCE: PHYSICIAN WELL-BEING

In 2023, the Medical Foundation of Nashville launched the PROSPER program. This program is a joint venture of the Foundation alongside the Nashville Academy of Medicine focused on promoting physician well-being. PROSPER was launched in response to the growing evidence base of increases in reported levels of burnout by physicians throughout the United States.

The main focus of 2023 was launching the program and beginning to establish an online resource center for the program as well as continuing to create opportunities for physicians to gather and engage with one another.

PHYSICIANS BALL

On October 21, 2023, the Medical Foundation of Nashville hosted the Physicians Ball—a vibrant event uniting the medical community for an evening of fun and fundraising success. This unique occasion offered physicians a relaxed environment to connect, away from the demands of practice, and celebrate our healthcare community. Attendees enjoyed dinner, dancing, a silent auction, and a brief program, contributing to a memorable and supportive gathering for our dedicated professionals.
